中学校 英語 解答用紙 (3枚のうち3)

4 (2) (続き)

(解答例) Rather than forcing students to merely memorize vocabulary, I will spend more time for communication activities in which the students actually use the given words. I would exercise care in two key areas. First, receptive skills such as listening and reading are usually developed first and contribute to cultivating productive skills like speaking and writing. Thus, I will carefully divide vocabulary into the two types of words and give enough opportunities for students to encounter them in listening and reading activities enough before they actually use them in speaking and writing activities.

Second, it is the most important for students to practice new vocabulary in situations that are similar to real life. By choosing activities or situations that are similar to real life conversation as possible, students will be more able to quickly and effectively use the new vocabulary they have learned outside of the classroom. Therefore, I will carefully choose classroom activities for each lesson and set my students up for further learning opportunities.
